

Your Celestial Heritage

Avery · Fictional Example

Your Soul Blueprint & Purpose

Your celestial story is offered as a spiritual mirror. These founder families and related expressions resonate with patterns in your answers; they do not establish a verified extraterrestrial identity or the exact birthplace of your soul.

Avian Oraphim

88.4 / 100 resonance

Specialized Oraphim expression

Inyu

82.3 / 100 resonance

Amethyst cetacean expression

Azurites / Azurite Yani

82.2 / 100 resonance

Sirian composite guardian expression

Avian Oraphim: The supplied illustrations show a winged or bird-like Oraphim expression. Composite Oraphim lineage; Alcyone-Pleiades council association. Dance for Life names avian Oraphim Serres in the Alcyone council. That association is not proof of personal origin.

Inyu: Cetacean or whale-like expressions associated with the Amethyst founder family. Lyra; Aveyon. Lyra-Aveyon is the named founder setting; additional Inyu affiliations appear in the Alcyone-Pleiades council narrative.

Azurites / Azurite Yani: A composite feline, avian, land- and water-mammal expression associated with cooperation and guardianship in the narrative. Sirius B; Azurline council association. The source describes a Sirius B lineage and a council named Azurline-Sirius B. It does not supply a verified planetary address for a participant. Portraits are artistic interpretations supplied by New Earth University. A consciousness collective, founder order, and specialized race expression are different categories; overlapping matches are expected.

Your Soul Blueprint & Role Blend

Your strongest role blend

Your answers point toward Ceremonialist, Gift Activator, Wisdom Teacher. Your soul blueprint is explored here as the meeting place of your values, recurring interests, developing abilities, and the people or places you want to serve. Let it be something you practice and refine, rather than a title you must prove.

Ceremonialist · 99.8 / 100

Designs and holds meaningful rituals for individuals and communities. Creates occasions for gratitude, release, commitment, remembrance, celebration, and the recognition of life transitions.

To begin: Interview a working ceremony designer and ask what a beginner can safely practice, what training matters, and how clients or employers find them.

Gift Activator · 99.5 / 100

Recognizes strengths that others may overlook in themselves. Creates opportunities for people to practice, develop confidence, and offer those abilities in a useful setting.

To begin: Interview a working strengths workshop facilitator and ask what a beginner can safely practice, what training matters, and how clients or employers find them.

Wisdom Teacher · 99.4 / 100

Makes meaningful teachings understandable and usable. Connects spiritual ideas with examples, reflection, and practices that students can explore in their own lives.

To begin: Interview a working spiritual studies educator and ask what a beginner can safely practice, what training matters, and how clients or employers find them.

The thread connecting heritage and purpose

Your heritage results bring a symbolic language for connection; your role answers show how that connection might become useful here. These are separate lenses. No founder family determines one inevitable profession, and your present skills and choices can change the expression of your calling.

Your destiny as an invitation

Ask: “What contribution would make me more honest, more alive, and more useful to the people I care about?” A meaningful path can include employment, creative work, study, care, leadership, or a quiet commitment. You do not need a public spiritual identity to fulfill a worthwhile purpose.

Close scores suggest a blend, not a single dominant role. These are transparent NEU reflection scores, not a standardized psychological test.

Purpose, Experience & Your Next Chapter

Acknowledge the life you have actually lived

You named a major life transition. Change can interrupt familiar roles and confidence. Choose a small experiment that lets your next chapter develop without requiring every answer at once.

Alchemize experience through choice

You can choose what you learn from an experience without calling the pain necessary, deserved, or spiritually required. Turn one insight into an observable practice: a clearer boundary, a more inclusive invitation, a steadier routine, or a small act of service. Keep support available, and share only what you want to share.

Skills and experience you named

Writing, teaching, and organizing small community gatherings. These are your self-reported strengths. Choose one you can demonstrate in a small portfolio piece or supervised practice; the assessment does not verify qualifications.

The people you want to serve

Adults who feel called into a new chapter of meaningful service. Speak with people in this group about their actual needs before deciding what they should want. Let their feedback shape the contribution.

Your intention for the next chapter

Offer honest spiritual teaching, create belonging, and test a sustainable livelihood. Use this as a direction for experiments, rather than a standard you must achieve immediately.

Birth context: 1990-06-21; 12:00 local time; New York, USA; America/New_York.

A subtle birth-pattern reflection

Sun: Cancer. Moon: Gemini. Ascendant: Virgo. Explore sensitivity, imagination, and compassionate presence. A useful question is: how can I pair care with boundaries and restoration?

Birth time recorded to the minute; historical time-zone boundaries and record accuracy should be confirmed.

Ascendant is withheld at polar latitudes.

Method: NASA/JPL DE440s with Skyfield; apparent geocentric tropical ecliptic of date. Astrological meanings are traditional / NEU interpretations, not evidence of celestial ancestry.

One reflection to carry forward

What did your life teach you to notice, and how could you meet that need with appropriate skill and healthy limits? You are free to choose a different meaning, seek support, or begin with something unrelated to a hardship.

Work, Service & Income Possibilities

These paths connect your strongest roles with work that people actually do. Some are conventional job titles; others are independent spiritual or creative practices. Investigate demand, training, local requirements, and your capacity before investing heavily.

Ceremonialist

Ceremony designer • Wedding / life-transition celebrant • Retreat ritual facilitator

Interview a working ceremony designer and ask what a beginner can safely practice, what training matters, and how clients or employers find them.

Possible service pilot: A clearly scoped pilot in wedding / life-transition celebrant for one specific audience, with transparent limits, format, and feedback.

Gift Activator

Strengths workshop facilitator • Creative confidence coach • Talent development coordinator

Interview a working strengths workshop facilitator and ask what a beginner can safely practice, what training matters, and how clients or employers find them.

Possible service pilot: A clearly scoped pilot in creative confidence coach for one specific audience, with transparent limits, format, and feedback.

Wisdom Teacher

Spiritual studies educator • Course creator • Workshop teacher

Interview a working spiritual studies educator and ask what a beginner can safely practice, what training matters, and how clients or employers find them.

Possible service pilot: A clearly scoped pilot in course creator for one specific audience, with transparent limits, format, and feedback.

Your preferred livelihood route

Choose one specific audience and need. Offer a small service with a clear format, scope, price, and feedback process. Avoid launching a full course before testing whether people value a smaller workshop, creative product, or practice session.

Because you want supplementary income, start with a low-overhead offer or a part-time role. Track time, costs, actual demand, and what people return for.

Training, scope, and ethical service

Coaching, ceremony, contemplative sound, spiritual teaching, and art are distinct from regulated clinical practice. Counseling, bodywork, work with children, professional architecture, and some guiding roles can require credentials, licensing, safeguarding, insurance, or supervision. Verify local requirements. Offer only what you can competently deliver, and describe the experience without promising medical treatment, guaranteed transformation, or guaranteed earnings.

Your First Month of Embodied Purpose

Choose one contribution to test. Your next chapter can begin with useful evidence of practice: a conversation, a small portfolio piece, a supervised session, or an invitation that meets a real need.

Within 48 hours · Name your useful contribution

Write: "I help [audience] with [specific need] through [skill or practice]." Begin with ceremonialist as a lens, then use your own words.

Week 1 · Find a mentor and verify your route

Interview a working ceremony designer and ask what a beginner can safely practice, what training matters, and how clients or employers find them. Ask for one reputable training or supervised practice route.

Week 2 · Practice at a sustainable scale

Reserve three hours this week. Rehearse with a trusted peer and ask for specific feedback on clarity, usefulness, and boundaries. Confidence can grow through evidence of practice.

Week 3 · Make the gift visible

Create a 60-second teaching video, or host a short TikTok / Instagram live with a practical exercise and one clear invitation.

Week 4 · Test livelihood and learn

Interview three people in a specific audience about what support they want. Define a small paid pilot with a clear outcome, duration, price, boundaries, and feedback process. Ask what the person or employer actually needs and revise your offer using their response.

Questions for a mentor

What preparation and boundaries matter in this work? What can a beginner safely practice? What qualifications do employers or clients expect? Where can I find supervised experience? What do people actually pay for, and what is a realistic first offer?

Review after 30 days

Which activity gave you energy? Which contribution was useful to someone else? What feedback challenged your assumptions? What needs further training? Continue, adjust, or change direction using what you learned. A purpose that develops through real relationship can remain spiritual and practical at the same time.

Research and matching notes: Weighted answer resonance, with an optional 2% NEU Sun-element reflection. Scores are independent 0-100 indices, not ancestry probabilities, and do not need to sum to 100. 97% current domain answers + 3% earlier heritage answer themes; then 60% domain fit + 40% specific role preference. Careers are NEU editorial suggestions filtered by the practical context, not credential or earnings predictions.

Celestial context: Dance for Life (A & A Deane, 2002), printed pp. 136-139; supplied reference; Dance for Life (A & A Deane, 2002), printed pp. 136-139; Dance for Life (A & A Deane, 2002), printed pp. 136-139; Voyagers II: The Secrets of Amenti (expanded edition), printed pp. 262-264. Role taxonomy: owner-supplied New Earth Archetypes. Career and action interpretations: New Earth University editorial design. No exact personal soul-origin claim is made.

To continue your practice: www.newearthuniversity.org/design-the-life-of-your-dreams